In the Dark Days of the Maori War - Peace in the Wairarapa - The Loyal Natives
Letter from the late Mr WARDELL

The following correspondence, which throws some light upon the part played by the loyal Natives in assisting the late Mr H S Wardell, at that time resident magistrate in the Wairarapa, to maintain peace and order during the troublous days of the Maori war, will be read with general interest.

[To the Editor]

Sir, I enclose a document which I received from my esteemed and loved friend, the late "Mr H S Wardell, which will be of interest to many who know too little of our early history and the troublous times that are now happily past. I am etc.,

TAIAWHIO TE TAU Masterton, 9th May 1912

Auckland, November, 1904

To Taiawhio Te Tau, Masterton

Friend, —I have been unable to visit you as I hoped when I wrote you last I expect to return from here shortly, but as my stay may be prolonged I will answer as far as I can the questions of your letter of 21st August last. Out of your kind feeling for me you ask the day of my birth. It was the 17th day of May 1830. My first arrival in Wairarapa was in May 1860. During the years that have followed we have had troubled times, but amidst all the trouble there has been reason for thankfulness that no blood was spilt, and although the friendly relations between tribes at times were greatly strained, friendship remained. You ask the years of the trouble, and the names of those who assisted in the good work of preserving peace and goodwill in Wairarapa during these perilous times. The trouble commenced in 1861 in sympathy with the King movement in Waikato, and became serious when the King's Flag was raised at Tukaioa on the 23rd of December 1862. In 1863 Wi Tako visited Wairarapa as an emissary of the King's party, and many violent things were said by those Natives who supported that party, the Militia were therefore called out at the Hutt. The supporters of the King in Wairarapa became alarmed and threatened to take up arms. Letters which excited the people came from the King and Wi Tako and Ngairo wrote angrily with the result that a large number of European women and children left Wairarapa. In consequence of this it was considered necessary to take precautions against danger, and rifles were brought to Greytown on the 23rd of August. On the 24th of August an armed party of Natives from Masterton approached Greytown. Ngatuere would have opposed them at the bridge, but was prevented. Rifles were served out to volunteers in Greytown and the armed Natives were allowed to march through the town.

The King party continued to keep the people in a state of unrest, and in January 1864 the Defence Force (troopers) were stationed at Featherston to give confidence to those who were content with the Queen's Government. In 1865 the Hauhau teaching came and increased the trouble. Ngairo paid a visit to Waikato and a pah was built at Rangitumau. Te Rangihiroa came to the district with an armed party, and Hauhaus became numerous, and in May 1865 the troopers were removed to Masterton. At this time Wi Tako with Matene Te Whiwhi and others visited the district as emissaries of peace. Nevertheless in June of that year Ngairo, Wi Waka and others left to join those engaged in hostilities against the Queen on the West Coast, and Karauria Ngawhara was appointed "King." In March 1866 Wi Waka returned, and in July took the oath of allegiance to the Queen. Ngairo returned on 15th of September. He was accompanied by Wi Hapi, and a armed party who left for their home on the 16th of November of the same year and Ngairo and his party then yielded to the Queen's authority. The Hauhau teaching was gradually abandoned, and all became peace.

You ask who were those amongst the Native chiefs who assisted in bringing this about.

There are many whose names are not in my memory - those which are ever before me are – Ihaia Te Whakamairu, Hemi Te Milha, Raniero Te Iho, Te Retimana, Tekawenga, Marakaia, Hamuera Maraitai. I think Te Hiko ought to be added, but I am not sure; also Wi Te Weu Mahupuku who, although belonging to the King party, gave me always great assistance in preserving peace and order.

I hope to see you soon and talk this matter over. Na to hoa aroha.
H. S. WARDELL. Na Te Watere.

Obituary Mr H S Wardell

A brief message in our columns of yesterday, which was received at a very late hour, contained the announcement of the death of Mr Henry S Wardell, an announcement which we would readily come as a shock to old identities of the 'district. Mr Wardell had been in Masterton only a few days previous to his death, and had mingled with old friends and shaken hands with some of the younger generation who knew him, by repute alone. Few thought that he was then so near the divide. And yet the dispensation has come. The life of the departed gentleman will live long in the history of the Wairarapa. Born in London in 1830, he came to New Zealand in the year 1855, landing in Auckland in the ship "Merchantman." Soon after his arrival he was appointed to the responsible position of Magistrate in charge of the East Coast district. Those were troublous times, when determination and acumen were necessary to the preservation of human life. Associated with him were Colonel Porter, Colonel Roberts and others who saw duty. In the year 1860 the late Mr Wardell was appointed Magistrate to the Wairarapa, and here, as on the East Coast, he rendered admirable service. For twenty five years he presided over the local Magistrate's Court. But it was not alone in the administration of justice that he was an important figure. He did much to preserve law and order when the Government found itself weak in territorial forces. He was associated with, the Wairarapa Militia, and directed the movements of military bodies to conserve the livelihood of the few inhabitants who then patronised the district. In his movement he was ably assisted by the late Mr J J Freeth, for many years Clerk of the Court at Masterton. He was the founder of the Wairarapa racing Cub, of which he remained Patron, to his death. After a long and faithful service in the Wairarapa, Mr Wardell was appointed to the Magistracy of Wellington, a position which he filled with credit until the year 1888, when he retired on pension. Since then, he has occupied the position, of relieving Magistrate in various parts of the Dominion. In 1873, he acquired Te Whiti station, near Masterton, on lease, subsequently securing the freehold. Mrs Wardell died in 1887, and three years later he married the widow of the late Mr John Sheeban. His family consists of three sons and four daughters by his first wife, and one son and, one daughter by his second wife.

Mr Wardell' was one of the founders and the first president of the Home for the Aged Needy, Wellington, and was a member for very many years of the Academy of fine Arts, being President up till a short time ago. In his young days at Home he took up the study of art, obtaining a Somerset House scholarship. He was an exhibitor in sculpture at the great exhibition held in 1851, and in that and subsequent years exhibited at the Royal Academy.

During his long official career in New Zealand, Mr Wardell held many offices. He was made Commissioner of Native Reserves in 1861 and district judge in the same year. In 1898 he was appointed chairman of the Police Commission, member of the Stoke Industrial Commission in 1890, Native Schools Trust Commission 1905, and sat on many other commissions. He was a member of the South Island Representation Commission, and president of the New Zealand Academy of Fine Arts. Deceased is survived by four sons and four 3 daughters. They are Messrs W Wardell of Te Whiti, V Wardell Bay of Islands, and H Wardell of Stronvar, Miss Teresa Wardell, of Wellington, Mrs George Pearce of Lower Hutt; Mrs Norman Beetham of Masterton, and two young children, a boy and girl, both offspring of the second marriage. One daughter, the late Mrs John Macrae, predeceased him a few years ago. The funeral will leave St Patrick's Church, Masterton, on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock
